Why World Peace Is Possible: Exploring the Anatomy of Violence and War

Paul K. Chappell. Nuclear Age Peace Foundation Peace Leadership Director since leaving active duty in Iraq in 2009. Mr. Chappell graduated from West Point in 2002 and served as a captain in Iraq. He is the author of the Road to Peace series about waging peace, ending war, the art of living, and what it means to be human. He speaks around the world and throughout the country on Peace Leadership and how we might end war. His website is www.peacefulrevolution.com

The Nuclear Age Peace Foundation was founded in 1982. Its mission is to educate and advocate for peace and a world free of nuclear weapons and to empower peace leaders. The Foundation is a non-partisan, non-profit organization with consultative status to the United Nations and is comprised of individuals and groups worldwide who realize the imperative for peace in the Nuclear Age.

Converging on the Russian Border: Hot Spots & Nuclear Risks

Steven Starr. Senior Scientist Physicians for Social Responsibility, Associate member of the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation, Director of Clinical Laboratory Science Program, University of Missouri-Columbia, writer. He speaks around the world and across the U.S. regarding the risks of and environmental humanitarian consequences of nuclear war. Mr. Starr has worked with the UN and the governments of Switzerland, Chile, and New Zealand, in support of their efforts to eliminate thousands of high-alert, launch-ready nuclear weapons.
